

Portfolio Assessment

Theo Harris

Overview

Wireframes

Landing Page

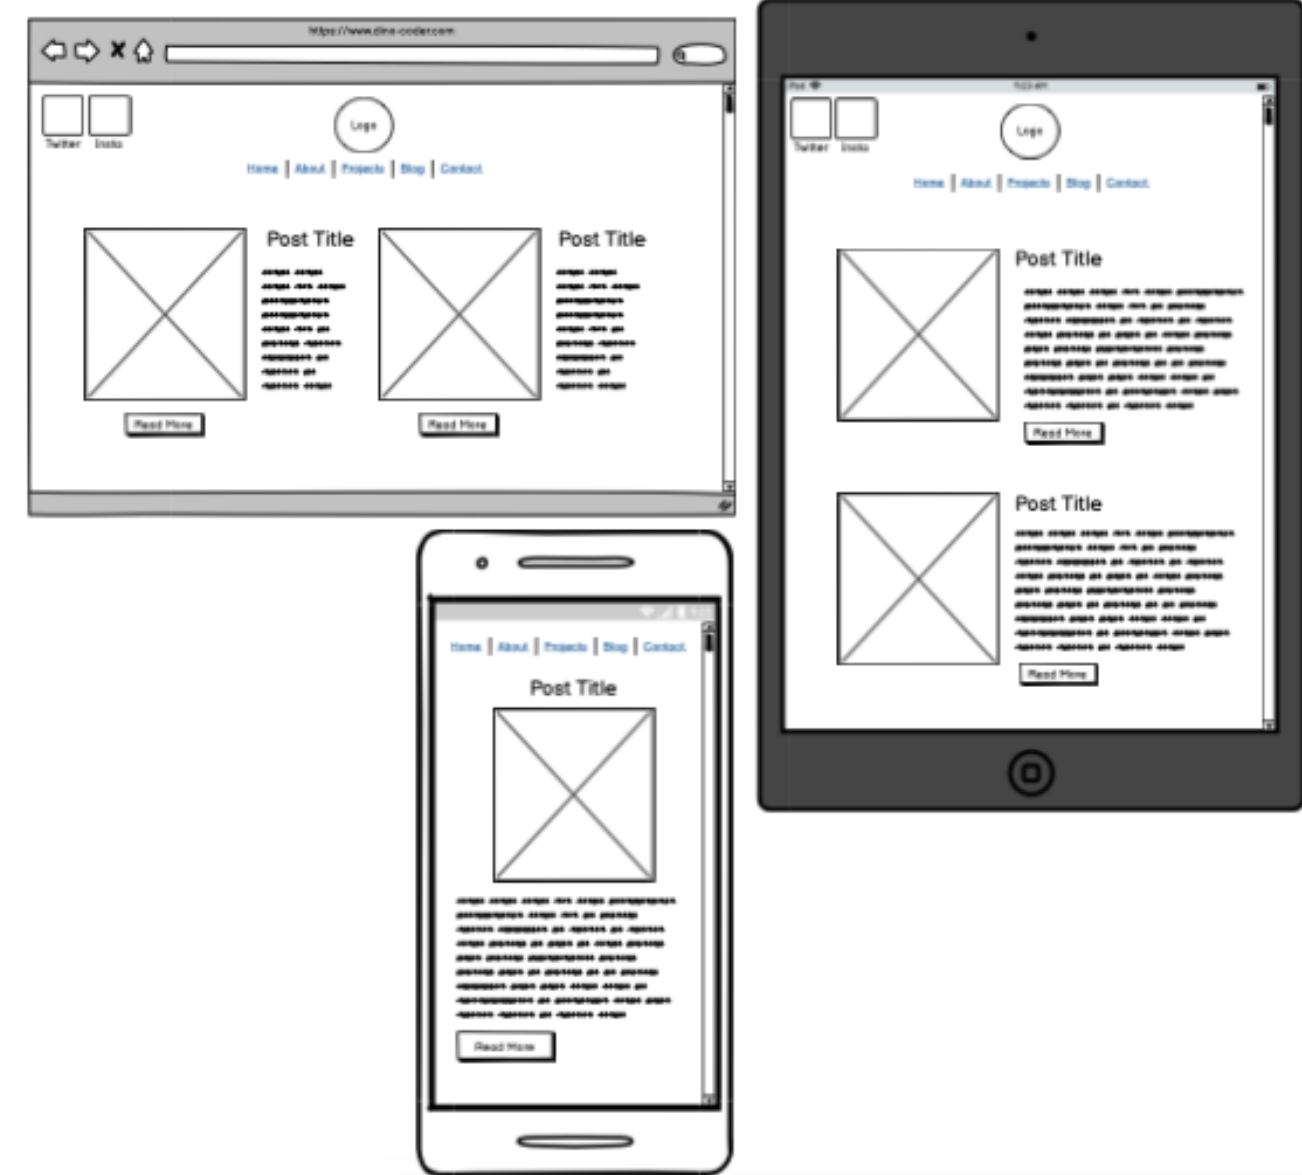

About Page

Wireframes

Projects Page

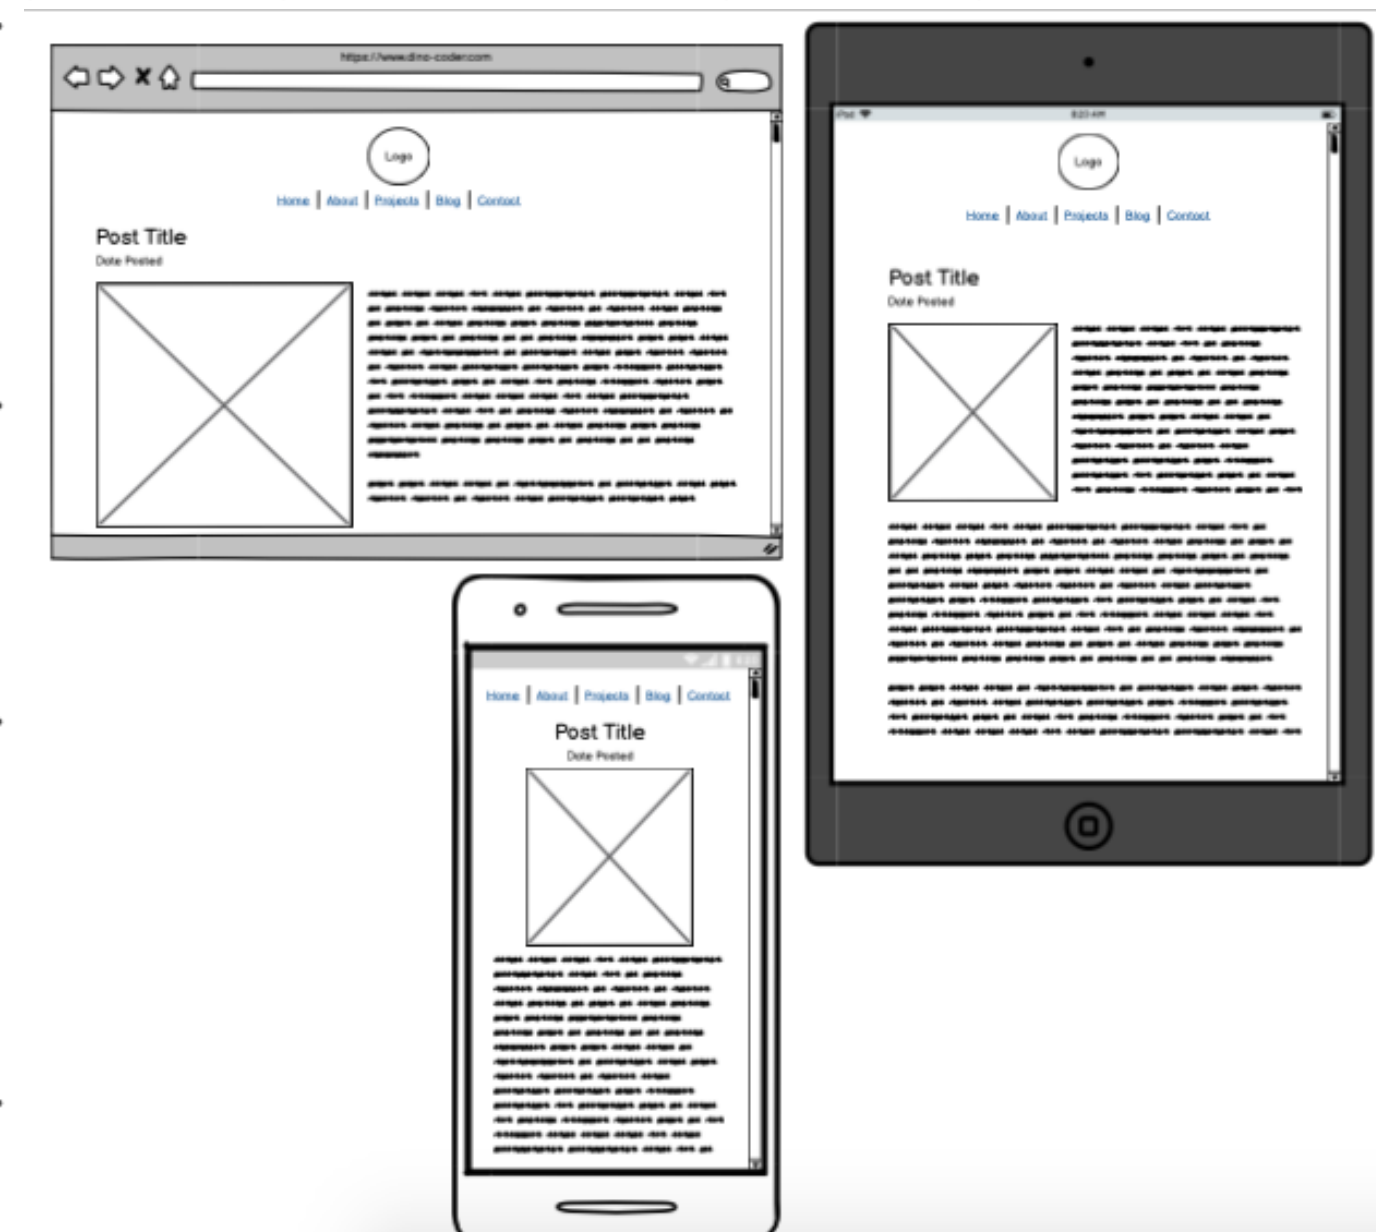

Blog

Wireframes

Contact Form

Blog Post

Design Components

I wanted to avoid my site feeling too sterile, but I still wanted to limit the palette to keep it looking professional while using hues that felt energetic and engaging.

I also wanted a simple logo to enhance my personal brand.

To keep the bright and energetic feel, I used free assets from OpenPeeps to create some cartoon images across the site.

Previous Experience

Australian Geographic, 2018-2020

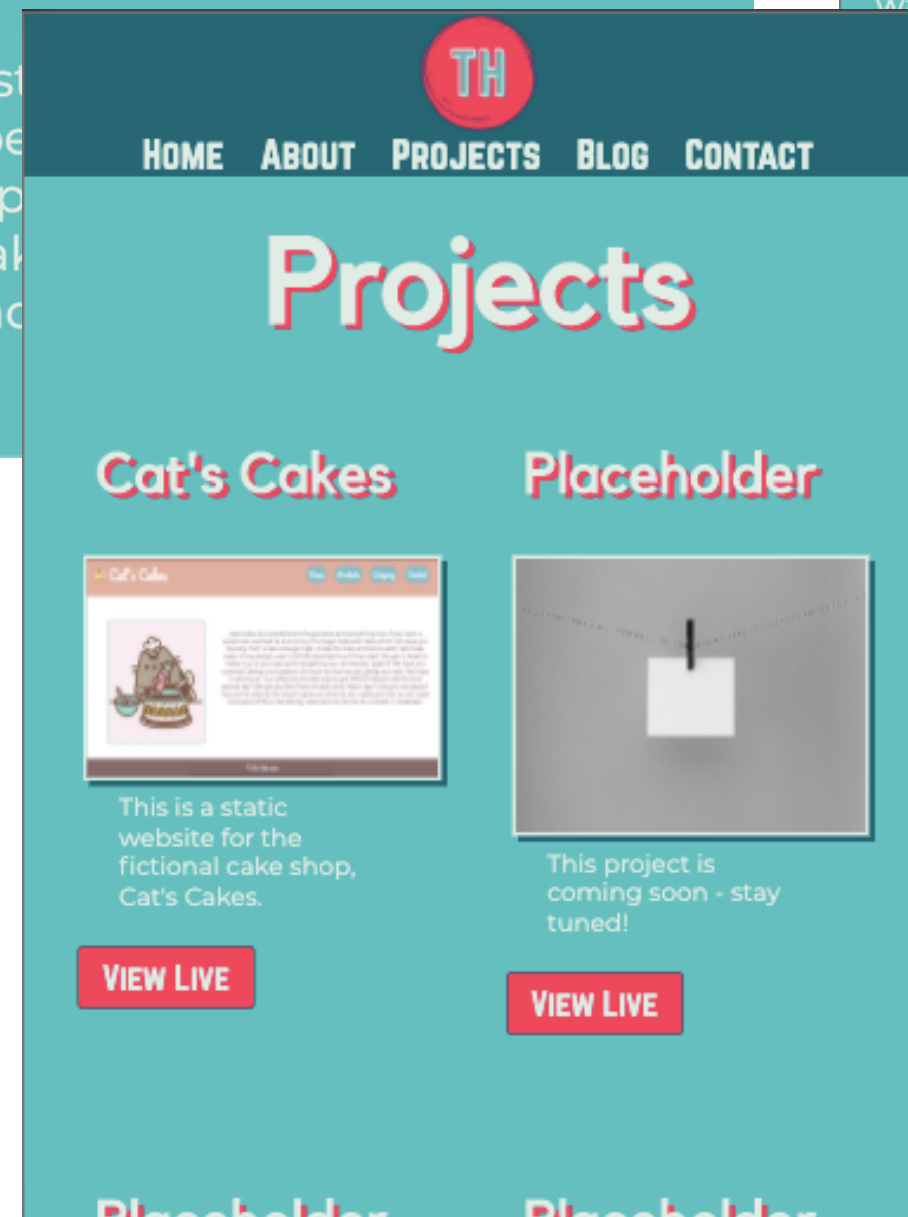

During my time at Australian Geographic, I built a strong foundation of interpersonal skills by dealing with highly specialised customer requests and problems. This position required specialised knowledge of products used for STEM education, as well as scientific tools such as microscopes and telescopes. I was also responsible for training junior staff members who joined us during holiday periods.

Cash Handling and Admin Duties
Customer Service and Product Assistance
Technical Knowledge
Visual Merchandising and OHS Enforcement

Petstock, 2015-2017

ABOUT

TWITTER

What worked!

- limiting the color palette to 4 hues
- using bright colors to emphasise clickables
- mobile-first design

...And what didn't

- position: absolute;
- flexbox wrapper placement
- social icons

Remember for next time:

- plan where flex wrappers will go during initial design stages
- repeat less css
- KISS